Julius Caesar was probably the best-known Roman emperor. He extended the empire through invading other lands.

Rome was created by two brothers, Romulus and Remus who were abandoned after they were born.

Boudicca was a queen of the British Celtic Iceni tribe who led an uprising against the occupying forces of the Roman Empire.

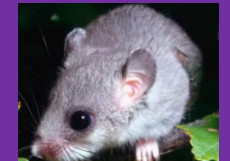

Roman Towns

There were all laid out in the same way with straight streets shaped in a grid pattern, with buildings like a bath house, temple, aqueducts and an amphitheatre. They also had forums, which were big open squares where people could set up stalls to sell things.

Claudius (10 BCE – 54)

Led to the successful invasion of Britain and was responsible for building lots of new roads and aqueducts throughout the Empire.

Romans used to eat food like dormice dipped in honey.

What Happened to the Romans?

The Empire became too big to rule and in 285, Emperor Diocletian split the Empire in two halves, East and West. The Western Empire ended in 476, and the Eastern Empire carried on until 1453. Britain was part of the Western Empire, but the Romans left it in 410 AD because the soldiers and leaders who ruled Britain were needed to defend other parts of the Empire.

When the Romans came to Britain they helped us by creating roads; a written language (which was Latin); introduced coins and even introduced rabbits to our country.

Coins were used to trade but were also ways for the emperor to tell people about the great things they did (or wanted people to think they did). Coins could be minted that showed pictures of them with their name or other words and symbols on it.
